Tracing Boards FUNSCITEK®

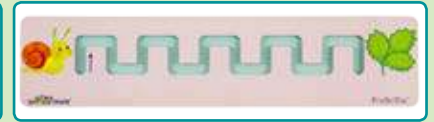

Finger and Pencil Tracing helps to build:

- Fine motor skills.
- Pre-writing skills.
- Concentration and focus.
- Visual-spatial skills.
- Creativity and drawing skills.

Finger tracing is an important multi-sensory activity. Strong neuroscience evidence showing the strong connection between the hands and the brain. Children needs different multi-sensory materials to guide their learning.

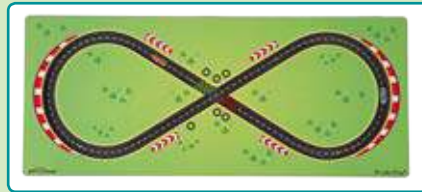

Single Pattern Tracing

Tracing single patterns is important to prepare children for writing letters and numbers. Letters and numbers are made up of circles, straight lines, curves, and diagonal lines. Tracing also improves the coordination between the fingers, hands and wrists and provides fine motor practice that strengthens the finger and hand muscles. Follow the paths with your finger, tracing pen, marble, or push the marble with the tracing pen. You can also fill the grooves with play dough or dry rice.

Wall Board

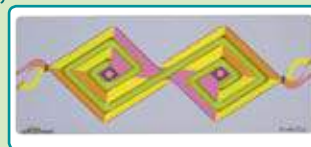

Letter and Number Tracing

The use of concrete materials provide children with a better understanding of abstract concepts such as letters and numbers. Tracing numbers and letters is an informal fun way to introduce numbers and letters to children, and later then how to write numbers and letters.

Double Pattern Tracing Exercise

Following the grooves at the same time improve the interaction and synchronisation of the left and right hemispheres of the brain. The grooves can be traced using a finger, marble or pencil, starting at the beginning of the path, and following the complete path. First exercise only one hand, e.g. the left hand on the left side, and then the right hand on the right side. Then with both hands at the same time. Both hemispheres of the brain are involved in the work and they are synchronised.

Tracing board exercises also affects the corpus callosum (communication between the left and right side of the brain), as a result improving spatial perception, long-term memory, hand movement coordination and fine motor skills. Tracing boards can be used by children and adults of all ages.
